The Future of Hawaii.

In consequence of the revival of the report that steps are about to be taken for the annexation of Hawaii by the United States, or failing that, for enlisting the sympathies of Great Britain in placing Princess Kaiulani on the throne, a representative of Reuter's Agency has called upon Colonel G. W. Macfarlane, a prominent Hawaiian, who has recently arrived in London, and who for many years was aide-de-camp to the late King Kalakaua. Colonel Macfarlane, in reply to questions, said:—"I have been informed that in December next, when the United States Congress reassembles, a few Hawaiian politicians and merchants, who are in favour of the late form of government, will wait upon President Cleveland and urge the United States Government to annex the Hawaiian group. The primary object of this deputation, it is said, to test the sincerity of the officials of the Hawaiian Republic. It must be remembered that a large number of Americans joined the Republican party on the full and complete understanding that the Republican Government was only to be a temporary one until such time as the annexation of the islands to the United States could be brought about. The Republicans having been in office for over a year and no special efforts having apparently been made to attain this end, the American Republicans are dubious regarding the intentions of the Hawaiian Republic. Hence the contemplated application to the United States. The native inhabitants, although not altogether opposed to annexation to the United States, failing a monarchical restoration, are inclined to prefer annexation to Great Britain to a continuance of the Republic. The sympathies of the Hawaiian people have always been strongly British. My own view is that the present situation must resolve itself either into the permanent establishment of a republic, or the permanent restoration of the monarchy on a compromise basis, by which the best elements drawn from both political parties would form a coalition Government, for it is undeniable that there are men of undoubted capacity and integrity at the head of the present Government and a continuation of these would be productive of a strong coalition Administration, satisfactory to the great majority of the people. This compromise would involve the granting of a general suffrage and the abolition of the property qualification, which deprives natives of the right to elect senators. Failing a coalition Government on the lines indicated, annexation to the United States would be most advantageous from a commercial point of view, but I have no doubt that, if a test vote were taken, the natives, who constitute the majority, would vote largely in favour of closer political relations with Great Britain." Speaking on the present situation in Hawaii, Colonel Macfarlane said:—"The ex-Queen Liliuokalani is still a prisoner in her former palace in Honolulu, and I hear by yesterday's mail that some indignation was felt at the refusal of the Government to allow Major Wodehouse to call and take leave of her Majesty. With regard to the claims made to the United States and British Governments by their respective subjects, who suffered imprisonment and banishment—without trial—during the recent revolution, a demand has just been made by the United States Minister in Honolulu under orders from Washington, for the payment of $25,000 to Mr. Durrell, an American subject. Other claims are said to be pending."—The London Times Weekly Edition.
